Memorandum 66-2

Subject: Study 44 - Fictitious Name Statute

At its last meeting, the Commission decided that the Fictitious Name Statute should be repealed and that applicants for certain licenses (who are now required to prove compliance with the Fictitious Name Statute in order to obtain their licenses) should be required to file substantially identical information with the appropriate licensing agency.

Attached are two copies of a tentative recommendation intended to effectuate these decisions. Please mark any suggestions you may have for revision on one of the copies for return to the staff at the February meeting.

Policy questions

The present law requires that real estate brokers and salesmen, mineral and oil brokers and salesmen, and check sellers and cashers prove compliance with the Fictitious Name Statute before they can obtain a license in a fictitious name. However, the pertinent provision dealing with yacht and ship brokers merely provides that a broker cannot use a fictitious name unless he has been issued a license bearing such name. The tentative recommendation requires that an applicant furnish certain information to the appropriate licensing agency before any of the above licenses may be issued to him in a fictitious name.

No change is essential in the statute governing yacht and ship brokers because that statute does not incorporate by reference the Fictitious Name Statute (which we propose to repeal). Nevertheless, we believe that substantially the same statutory provision should be made applicable to the four classes of licensees. It should be noted that we are not imposing a more burdensome requirement on yacht and ship brokers using a fictitious name because they are now required to comply with the Fictitious Name Statute if they wish to "maintain" a suit on a cause of action arising out of their licensed activity.

As noted below, the proposed legislation will not require check sellers and cashers to furnish any more information than they now furnish to the licensing agency. However, it will require the other licensees to provide the licensing agency with more information than they now furnish to the agency. Since the filing of a fictitious name certificate will impose some additional burden on these licensees, we are concerned whether the best policy might not be to dispense with the filing of the fictitious name certificate altogether. However, we do not recommend this at this time. We would like to send the tentative recommendation in its present form to the appropriate licensing agencies and the professional organizations concerned and receive their reactions before we determine whether the filing of the fictitious name certificate is unnecessary.

Proposed Legislation

The new sections governing applications for licenses in a fictitious name are substantially the same for the four licensed activities. The wording used in subdivision (c) of each proposed section (Sections 8936.1, 10159.5, and 10522.5 of the Business and Professions Code and Section 12204.5 of the Financial Code), prescribing what information must be filed with the licensing board, is taken from Financial Code Section 12201 (check sellers and cashers), which reads:

12201. An application for a license shall be in writing, under oath, and in a form prescribed by the commissioner and shall contain the name, and the address both of the residence and place of business, of the applicant and if the applicant is a partnership or association, of every member thereof, and if a corporation, of every officer and director thereof.

Subdivision (c) of the proposed sections reads in substance:

(c) A person applying for a license or the renewal of a license to engage in the business of a check seller or cashier who desires to have the license issued or renewed under a fictitious name shall file a fictitious name certificate with the application for the license or renewal of the license. The fictitious name certificate shall be in writing, under oath, and in a form prescribed by the commissioner and shall state the fictitious name and the name, and the address both of the residence and place of business, of the applicant and if the applicant is a partnership or association, of every member thereof, and if a corporation, of every officer and director thereof. The commissioner shall designate the person or persons who are required to execute the certificate on behalf of a partnership, association, or corporation. The commissioner may include the fictitious name certificate as a part of the application for the license or renewal of the license. No license may be issued or renewed in a fictitious name unless the certificate required by this section has first been filed with the commissioner.

The information required under the proposed subdivision (c) is substantially the same as that required under the Fictitious Name Statute. However, subdivision (c) is more explicit regarding what is required of corporations and imposes the additional requirement that the business address of the applicant be listed in the certificate (the Fictitious Name Statute merely requires the place of residence). Nevertheless, comparison of the two sections will demonstrate that no significant additional burden is imposed on the applicant in complying with the proposed subdivision.

Respectfully submitted,

TENTATIVE RECOMMENDATION of the
CALIFORNIA LAW REVISION COMMISSION relating to
THE FICTITIOUS NAME STATUTE

The Fictitious Name Statute--Civil Code Sections 2466-2471--provides that every person or partnership transacting business in a fictitious name, or a designation not showing the names of the persons interested as partners in the business, must file a certificate with the clerk of the county in which the principal place of business is located and must subsequently have the certificate published in a newspaper. The certificate must show the name and place of residence of the person or partners transacting business in the fictitious name. A new certificate must be filed and published on each change in the membership of such a partnership.

The sanction for failing to comply with the Fictitious Name Statute is that no action may be "maintained" on a contract made or a transaction had in a fictitious name until the fictitious name certificate has been filed and published. The courts have interpreted "maintained" to mean that an action may be commenced even if no fictitious name certificate has been filed and published; but, if the defendant objects to the failure to comply with the Fictitious Name Statute, the action will be abated until the certificate has been filed and published. The objection is waived if the defendant fails to make it either in his answer or by demurrer. If the defendant objects, the defect can be cured by filing the certificate and making the necessary publication prior to the actual trial of the case. If objection is made and the required filing and publication are not made, the action must be dismissed.

The courts have said that the purpose of the Fictitious Name Statute is to prevent fraudulent trading by providing a source from which persons can learn with whom they are trading. However, since the statute has been interpreted to permit the required filing and publication at any time prior to trial, it does not protect against fraudulent trading. For the statute to accomplish this purpose, it would be necessary to provide that any transaction had in a fictitious name prior to the filing and publication of the fictitious name certificate is either void or unenforceable. Such a provision would be undesirable for it would create a trap for the unwary and would provide a technical defense that would defeat many meritorious causes of action.

Moreover, it appears that a fictitious name certificate is not filed and published in many, if not most, cases where business is transacted in a fictitious name. And, even where the certificate is filed and published, it is doubtful that many persons use the information contained in the certificate. Since the Fictitious Name Statute does not protect against fraudulent trading, its primary contribution might appear to be to assist in discovery when an action is brought on a transaction entered into in a fictitious name. However, the California discovery statute, which was enacted long after the Fictitious Name Statute, provides a more comprehensive and economical method of obtaining the information needed when such an action is brought.

The Fictitious Name Statute imposes burdensome requirements, especially in its application to large partnerships and those unincorporated associations which are treated as partnerships for the purpose of determining liability. This is particularly true with respect to the requirement that a new certificate be filed and published on each change in the members of the organization. Moreover, where the certificate was not filed and published, a large partnership with a fluctuating membership apparently would be required, as a condition to maintaining an action, to file and publish a series of certificates reflecting each change in membership during the period covered by the transaction upon which the action is based.

The Fictitious Name Statute was enacted in 1872 as a part of the Civil Code chapter on General Partnership. All of this chapter except the portion dealing with fictitious names was repealed when the Uniform Partnership Act and the Uniform Limited Partnership Act were enacted in 1929. The Uniform Acts contain provisions that should be regarded as superseding the Fictitious Name Statute in principle even though not technically repealing it by implication. See Corporations Code Sections 15010.5 and 15035.5 (Uniform Partnership Act) and Corporations Code Section 15502 (Uniform Limited Partnership Act). These provisions of the Corporations Code relating to the filing and publishing of information concerning general and limited partnerships provide all the protection to third persons that is today necessary or desirable.

For these reasons, the Law Revision Commission has concluded that the Fictitious Name Statute is not of sufficient value to justify the expense and burden it imposes on businessmen. Accordingly, the Commission makes the following recommendations:

1. Civil Code Sections 2466-2471 (the Fictitious Name Statute) and Government Code Section 26848 (which prescribes the fee for filing and indexing a fictitious name certificate) should be repealed.

2. The repeal of the Fictitious Name Statute makes it necessary to revise provisions in other codes that make compliance with the Fictitious Name Statute a prerequisite to obtaining a license as a real estate broker or salesman (Business and Professions Code Section 10159.5), mineral, oil, and gas broker or salesman (Business and Professions Code Section 10522.5), or check seller and casher (Financial Code Section 12300.2). In addition, revision of the law relating to yacht and ship brokers is desirable, since Section 8936.1 of the Business and Professions Code provides that no person may act as a yacht and ship broker in a fictitious name unless his license has been issued in the fictitious name. However, an applicant for such a license in his fictitious name is not required to show that he has complied with the Fictitious Name Statute.

The Commission recommends that the state agencies regulating the particular licensees mentioned above be required to maintain a file containing the fictitious name certificates of their licensees who engage in business using fictitious names. This will make available to the public the same information that now only sometimes is available under the Fictitious Name Statute and, at the same time, will relieve these licensees and other businessmen of the onerous burden of complying with that statute. The cost of publication of the fictitious name certificate in a newspaper will be eliminated, and the licensees required to provide information for the files maintained by the state agencies will be able to do so with a minimum of expense and inconvenience. Moreover, the recommended substitute for the Fictitious Name Statute will provide a more effective sanction than now exists in those cases where the statute apparently serves some useful purpose, for the license will not be issued in a fictitious name unless a fictitious name certificate has been filed with the state agency and a license will be suspended or revoked if the licensee does business in a fictitious name without having first filed such a certificate.

The Commission's recommendations would be effectuated by the enactment of the following measure:

An act to repeal Chapter 2 (commencing with Section 2466) of Title 10 of Part 4 of Division 3 of the Civil Code, to add Sections 8936.1, 10159.5, and 10522.5 to, and to repeal Sections 8936.1, 10159.5, and 10522.5 of, the Business and Professions Code, to add Section 12204.5 to, and to repeal Section 12300.2 of, the Financial Code, and to repeal Section 26848 of the Government Code, relating to fictitious names.

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. Chapter 2 (commencing with Section 2466) of Title 10 of Part 4 of Division 3 of the Civil Code is repealed.

Comment. This chapter, consisting of Sections 2466-2471, is the Fictitious Name Statute and is repealed for the reasons previously stated in this tentative recommendation.

Note. The sections to be repealed read as follows:

§ 2466. [User of fictitious name to file and publish certificate: Contents: Affidavit of publication.] Except as otherwise provided in the next section every person transacting business in this State under a fictitious name and every partnership transacting business in this State under a fictitious name, or a designation not showing the names of the persons interested as partners in such business, must file with the clerk of the county in which his or its principal place of business is situated, a certificate subscribed and acknowledged in the manner provided in Section 2468 of the Civil Code, stating that name in full and the place of residence of such person and stating the names in full of all the members of such partnership and their places of residence.

Such subscribed and acknowledged certificate must be published subsequent to the filing thereof with the county clerk pursuant to Government Code Section 6064, in a newspaper published in the county, if there be one, and if there be none in such county, then in a newspaper in an adjoining county. An affidavit showing the publication of such certificate as in this section provided shall be filed with the county clerk within 30 days after the completion of such publication, but in no event shall such publication be made prior to the filing of such certificate with the county clerk.

§ 2467. [Exception: Foreign commercial or banking partnership.] A commercial or banking partnership, established and transacting business in a place without the United States, may, without filing the certificate or making the publication prescribed in the last section, use in this state the partnership name used by it there, although it be fictitious, or do not show the names of the persons interested as partners in such business.

§ 2468. [Signing and acknowledgment of certificate: Time for filing and publication: Action not maintainable until certificate filed.] The certificate filed with the clerk as provided in Section 2466 must be signed by the person therein referred to, or by the partners, as the case may be, and acknowledged before some officer, authorized to take the acknowledgment of conveyances of real property, by personally appearing before such officer notwithstanding the provisions of Section 1195 of the Civil Code. Where a business is hereafter commenced by a person under a fictitious name or a partnership is hereafter formed, the certificate must be filed and the publication designated in that section must be made within one month after the commencement of such business, or after the formation of the partnership, or within one month from the time designated in the agreement of its members for the commencement of the partnership. Where the business has been heretofore conducted under a fictitious name or where the partnership has been heretofore formed, the certificate must be filed and the publication made within six months after the passage of this act. No person doing business under a fictitious name, or his assignee or assignees, nor any persons doing business as partners contrary to the provisions of this article, or their assignee or assignees, shall maintain any action upon or on account of any contract or contracts made, or transactions had, under such fictitious name, or in their partnership name, in any court of this State until the certificate has been filed and the publication has been made as herein required.

Such certificate must be published pursuant to Government Code Section 6064, in a newspaper published in the county, if there be one, and if there be none in such county, then in a newspaper in an adjoining county. An affidavit showing the publication of such certificate shall be filed subsequent to the certificate with the county clerk within 30 days after the completion of such publication.

§ 2470. [Register of fictitious names: Entry of abandonment of fictitious name.] Every county clerk must keep a register of the names of firms and persons mentioned in the certificates filed with him pursuant to this article, entering in alphabetical order the name of every such person who does business under a fictitious name, and the fictitious name, and the name of every such partnership, and of each partner therein.

Upon the abandonment of the use of a fictitious name, the clerk shall enter the fact of abandonment in the register.

§ 2471. Certified copies of register, and proof of publication, to be evidence. Copies of the entries of a county clerk, as herein directed, when certified by him, and affidavits of publication, as herein directed, made by the printer, publisher, or chief clerk of a newspaper, are presumptive evidence of the facts therein stated.

SIC. 2. Section 26848 of the Government Code is repealed.

~~26848.---The-fee-for-filing-and-indexing-a-certificate-of-fictitious name,-including-affidavit-of-publication,-is-two-dollars-($2)..~~

Comment. This section, which provides the fee for filing and indexing a fictitious name certificate, is repealed because the statute which requires the filing of the certificate is repealed.

SEC. 3. Section 8936.1 of the Business and Professions Code is repealed.

~~8936.1.---No-fictitious-name-shall-be-used-by-a-broker-in-the conduct-of-any-business-for-which-a-license-is-required-under-this chapter-unless-a-license-bearing-such-fictitious-name-has-been issued-to-said-broker.~~

Comment. This section is superseded by new Section 8936.1 (added by this tentative recommendation).

SEC. 4. Section 8936.1 is added to the Business and Professions Code, to read:

8936.1. (a) As used in this section, "fictitious name" means a name other than:

(1) The name of the applicant or licensee if he is an individual.

(2) The names of the members of a partnership if the applicant or licensee is a partnership.

(3) The corporate name as set out in its articles of incorporation if the applicant or licensee is a corporation.

(b) No broker shall use a fictitious name in the conduct of any business for which a license is required under this chapter unless such broker has a license issued in such fictitious name. The commission may suspend or revoke the license of a broker for violation of this subdivision.

(c) A person applying for a license or the renewal of a license as a broker who desires to have the license issued or renewed in a fictitious name shall file a fictitious name certificate with the application for the license or renewal of the license. The fictitious name certificate shall be in writing, under oath, and in a form prescribed by the commission and shall state the fictitious name and the name, and the address both of the residence and place of business, of the applicant and if the applicant is a partnership, of every member thereof, and if a corporation, of every officer and director thereof. The commission shall designate the person or persons who are required to execute the certificate on behalf of a partnership or corporation.

The commission may include the fictitious name certificate as a part of the application for the license or renewal of the license. No license may be issued or renewed in a fictitious name unless the certificate required by this section has first been filed with the commission.

(d) The commission shall maintain a file of the fictitious name certificates arranged so that the fictitious names are in alphabetical order. A fictitious name certificate may be destroyed or otherwise disposed of five years after the time it was filed with the commission.

Comment. This section relates to yacht and ship brokers. It is substantially the same as Section 10159.5 (added by this tentative recommendation). See the Comment to that section.

The first sentence of subdivision (b) restates the substance of existing Section 8936.1 (repealed in this tentative recommendation). The second sentence of subdivision (b) is included to provide an additional sanction for violation of the subdivision. Under existing law, the only sanction is a criminal prosecution. See Section 8929 ("Every violation of this chapter is a misdemeanor.").

SEC. 5. Section 10159.5 of the Business and Professions Code is repealed.

~~10159.5. -- Every person applying for a license under this chapter who desires to have such license issued under a fictitious name shall file with his application a certified copy of both the entry of the county clerk and the affidavit of publication made pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 2 (commencing with Section 2466) of Title 10 of Part 4 of Division 3 of the Civil Code.~~

Comment. This section is superseded by new Section 10159.5 (added by this tentative recommendation).

SEC. 6. Section 10159.5 is added to the Business and Professions Code, to read:

10159.5. (a) As used in this section, "fictitious name" means a name which is other than:

(1) The name of the applicant or licensee if he is an individual.

(2) The names of the members of the partnership if the applicant or licensee is a partnership.

(3) The corporate name as set out in its articles of incorporation if the applicant or licensee is a corporation.

(b) No person shall use a fictitious name in the conduct of any business for which a license is required under this chapter unless such person has a license issued in such fictitious name.

(c) A person applying for a license or the renewal of a license under this chapter who desires to have such a license issued or renewed under a fictitious name shall file a fictitious name certificate with the application for the license or renewal of the license. The fictitious name certificate shall be in writing, under oath, and in a form prescribed by the commissioner and shall state the fictitious name and the name, and the address both of the residence and place of business, of the applicant and if the applicant is a partnership, of every member thereof, and if a corporation, of every officer and director thereof. The commissioner shall designate the person or persons who are required to execute the certificate on behalf of a partnership or corporation. The commissioner may include the fictitious name certificate as a part of the application for the license or renewal of the license. No license may be issued or renewed in a fictitious name unless the certificate required by this section has first been filed with the commissioner.

(d) The commissioner shall maintain a file of the fictitious name certificates arranged so that the fictitious names are in alphabetical order. A fictitious name certificate may be destroyed or otherwise disposed of five years after the time it was filed with the commissioner.

Comment. This section relates to real estate brokers and salesmen.

Subdivision (a), which defines "fictitious name," codifies the existing definition of "fictitious name" as developed by the courts in interpreting Civil Code Section 2466 (repealed in this tentative recommendation). See Andrews v. Glick, 205 Cal. 699, 272 Pac. 587 (1928)(partnership); Berg Metals Corp. v. Wilson, 170 Cal. App.2d 559, 339 P.2d 869 (1959)(corporation); Vagin v. Brown, 63 Cal. App.2d 504, 146 P.2d 923 (1944) (individual).

Subdivisions (b) and (c) supersede existing Section 10159.5 (repealed in this tentative recommendation) and Civil Code Section 2466 (repealed in this tentative recommendation). The procedure provided by subdivision (c) is sufficiently flexible to permit the commissioner to adopt application forms that will permit applicants for licenses and renewals of licenses to provide the necessary information at a minimum of inconvenience and expense.

Subdivision (d) requires the maintenance of a file that will serve as a substitute for the register required by Civil Code Section 2470 (repealed in this tentative recommendation). The provision authorizing destruction of fictitious name certificates after five years is permissive rather than mandatory. The five year period is intended to make the information in the certificates available to the public for a reasonable period and, at the same time, to eliminate the need to retain certificates that no longer serve a useful purpose.

SEC. 7. Section 10522.5 of the Business and Professions Code is repealed.

~~10522.5. -- Every person applying for a license under this chapter who desires to have such license issued under a fictitious name shall file with his application a certified copy of both the entry of the county clerk and the affidavit of publication made pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 2 (commencing with Section 2466) of Title 10 of Part 4 of Division 3 of the Civil Code.~~

Comment. This section is superseded by new Section 10522.5 (added by this tentative recommendation).

C

SEC. 8. Section 10522.5 is added to the Business and Professions Code, to read:

10522.5. (a) As used in this section, "fictitious name" means a name which is other than:

(1) The name of the applicant or licensee if he is an individual.

(2) The names of the members of the partnership if the applicant or licensee is a partnership.

(3) The corporate name as set out in its articles of incorporation if the applicant or licensee is a corporation.

(b) No person shall use a fictitious name in the conduct of any business for which a license is required under this chapter unless such person has a license issued in such fictitious name.

(c) A person applying for a license or the renewal of a license under this chapter who desires to have such license issued or renewed under a fictitious name shall file a fictitious name certificate with the application for the license or renewal of the license. The fictitious name certificate shall be in writing, under oath, and in a form prescribed by the commissioner and shall state the fictitious name and the name, and the address both of the residence and place of business, of the applicant and if the applicant is a partnership, of every member thereof, and if a corporation, of every officer and director thereof. The commissioner shall designate the person or persons who are required to execute the certificate on behalf of a partnership or corporation. The commissioner may include the fictitious name certificate as a part of the application for the license or renewal of the license.

No license may be issued or renewed in a fictitious name unless the certificate required by this section has first been filed with the commissioner.

(d) The commissioner shall maintain a file of the fictitious name certificates arranged so that the fictitious names are in alphabetical order. A fictitious name certificate may be destroyed or otherwise disposed of five years after the time it was filed with the commissioner.

Comment. This section relates to mineral, oil, and gas brokers and salesmen. It is substantially the same as Section 10159.5 (added by this tentative recommendation). See the Comment to that section.

SEC. 9. Section 12300.2 of the Financial Code is repealed.

~~12300.2. -- Every person engaging in the business of a check seller or cashier shall conduct such business under his true name unless he has complied with the provisions of Chapter 2, Title 10, Part 4, Division 3 of the Civil Code.~~

Comment. This section is superseded by Section 12204.5.

SEC. 10. Section 12204.5 is added to the Financial Code, to read:

12204.5. (a) As used in this section, "fictitious name" means a name which is other than:

- (1) The name of the applicant or licensee if he is an individual.
- (2) The names of the members of the partnership or association if the applicant or licensee is a partnership or association.
- (3) The corporate name as set out in its articles of incorporation if the applicant or licensee is a corporation.

(b) No person shall engage in the business of a check seller or cashier under a fictitious name unless such person has a license issued in such fictitious name.

(c) A person applying for a license or the renewal of a license to engage in the business of a check seller or cashier who desires to have the license issued or renewed under a fictitious name shall file a fictitious name certificate with the application for the license or renewal of the license. The fictitious name certificate shall be in writing, under oath, and in a form prescribed by the commissioner and shall state the fictitious name and the name, and the address both of the residence and place of business, of the applicant and if the applicant is a partnership or association, of every member thereof, and if a corporation, of every officer and director thereof. The commissioner shall designate the person or persons who are required to execute the certificate on behalf of a partnership, association, or corporation. The commissioner may include the fictitious name certificate as a part of the application for the license or renewal of the license. No license may be issued or renewed in a fictitious name unless the certificate required by this section has first been filed with the commissioner.

(d) The commissioner shall maintain a file of the fictitious name certificates arranged so that the fictitious names are in alphabetical order. The file is a public record. A fictitious name certificate may be destroyed or otherwise disposed of five years after the time it was filed with the commissioner.

Comment. This section relates to check sellers and cashers.

Subdivision (a), which defines "fictitious name," codifies the existing definition of "fictitious name" as developed by the courts in interpreting Civil Code Section 2466 (repealed in this tentative recommendation). See Andrews v. Glick, 205 Cal. 699, 272 Pac. 587 (1928)(partnership); Berg Metals Corp. v. Wilson, 170 Cal. App.2d 559, 339 P.2d 869 (1959)(corporation); Vagin v. Brown, 63 Cal. App.2d 504, 146 P.2d 923 (1944)(individual).

Subdivisions (b) and (c) supersede existing Section 12300.2 (repealed in this tentative recommendation) and Civil Code Section 2466 (repealed in this tentative recommendation). The procedure provided by subdivision (c) is sufficiently flexible to permit the commissioner to adopt application forms that will permit applicants for licenses and renewals of licenses to provide the necessary information at a minimum of inconvenience and expense. See Section 12201, which requires substantially the same information as is required under subdivision (c).

Subdivision (d) requires the maintenance of a file that will serve as a substitute for the register required by Civil Code Section 2470 (repealed in this tentative recommendation). The provision authorizing destruction of fictitious name certificates after five years is permissive rather than mandatory. The five year period is intended to make the information in the certificates available to the public for a reasonable period and, at the same time, to eliminate the need to retain certificates that no longer serve a useful purpose.

A STUDY RELATING TO THE
FICTITIOUS NAME STATUTE

Introduction

In 1957, the California Law Revision Commission was authorized to make a study to determine whether the law relating to the use of fictitious names¹ should be revised.

A fictitious name is one that fails to disclose the true names of all² persons who are interested in the enterprise. The fictitious name statute is substantive³ in that it prescribes conditions that must be met by anyone--sole proprietor, partnership, corporation or other--before suit can be maintained to enforce transactions had in such name. The statute's purpose is to prevent fraudulent trading by enabling persons dealing with⁴ individuals using a fictitious name to know with whom they are dealing.

The basic policy question to be resolved is whether the fictitious name statute should be revised, repealed, or retained. The study first discusses the present law in California and other jurisdictions. Then it analyzes the problems involved in each of the three alternatives and the subordinate policy considerations underlying an answer to the basic policy question. Since the fictitious name statute is not presently accomplishing its objective and since it would be equally undesirable to adopt the amendments necessary to make the statute effective, the study recommends that the fictitious name statute be repealed. Realizing that there may be disagreement on this conclusion, the study concludes with a discussion of the amendments that should be made in the fictitious name statute if it is to be retained.

THE PRESENT LAW IN CALIFORNIA AND OTHER JURISDICTIONS

Existing California Law

Civil Code Sections 2466-2471

Sections 2466-2471 of the Civil Code deal with the use of fictitious names. Section 2466 provides, inter alia, (1) that every person transacting¹ business in this state under a fictitious name, or a designation not showing the true names of the persons interested in the business, must file with the clerk of the county in which the business has its principal office a subscribed and acknowledged certificate stating the full name and residence of the persons comprising the business and (2) that the certificate must subsequently be published in a newspaper in the county and a certificate of publication must be² later filed. Section 2469 requires a new certificate to be filed and published on the occasion of every change in the membership of the firm. Section 2469.1 authorizes but does not require a person upon ceasing to use a fictitious name to file and publish a certificate of abandonment thereof.³ The courts have said that the purpose of the fictitious name statutes is to enable persons dealing with persons using a fictitious name to know the individuals with⁴ whom they are dealing or to whom they are giving credit or becoming bound.

The sole penalty provided for failure to comply with Section 2466 et seq. is stated in Section 2468: "No person doing business under a fictitious name, or his assignee or assignees, nor any persons doing business as partners contrary to the provisions of this article, or their assignee or assignees, shall maintain any action upon or on account of any contract or contracts made, or transactions had, under such fictitious name, or in their partnership name, in any court of this State until the certificate has been filed and the publication has been made as herein required."⁵ Originally, it was held that the filing of a complaint is an incident to "maintaining an action" so that the certificate required by this legislation must have been filed prior to the filing of a complaint in any action involving a contract or transaction made under a fictitious name.⁶ Numerous later decisions have relaxed this stringent interpretation,⁷ however, so that it is now clear that the certificate may be filed and publication may be made at any time before trial after suit is brought.⁸

The fictitious name legislation does not authorize a person or group of persons doing business under a fictitious name to file suit in the fictitious name as a party plaintiff. Arguments to this effect have uniformly been rejected by the courts.⁹ As a result, the statute is construed as a substantive rule of law that prevents a person from maintaining any action upon a contract or other transaction made under a fictitious name until there has been compliance with the statute.¹⁰ However, a suit filed in a fictitious name is merely a procedural defect that must be objected to in a timely manner by the defendant or the defect is waived.¹¹

Commercial or banking partnerships established outside the United States are exempted from the coverage of the fictitious name legislation.¹² The fictitious name statutes only apply to those businesses which have a "local habitation" or principal place of business in California.¹³ Among the types of business organizations included within the legislation are sole proprietorships,¹⁴ partnerships,¹⁵ unincorporated cooperative associations,¹⁶ joint stock companies,¹⁷ "Massachusetts" or business trusts,¹⁸ and corporations.¹⁹ It should be noted that Section 2466 only mentions persons and partnerships. Consequently, Sections 2466-2471 have been applied only when the substantive liability of the members of an organization is to be determined by applying partnership law.²⁰ Since this result appears to be compelled by the wording of Section 2466, there appears to be no safeguard against the use of fictitious names by an organization whose members have their individual liability determined on agency principles.

The statute applies to any business name that fails to include the true names of all interested persons. Where suffixes, conjunctions, hyphens, and the like are used in connection with a business name, the law varies with respect to the necessity for compliance with the fictitious name legislation, apparently depending upon whether a partnership or other group of persons is concerned or only a sole proprietor is involved. Thus, in the case of a partnership, the use of a surname or surnames, even when not "fictitious" in the sense of its not being the true name of the interested partners, together with words or abbreviations such as "Co.,"²¹ "& Co.,"²² "& Son,"²³ or "Bros."²⁴ makes it necessary to comply with the statute. Where there is no such suffix, however, a partnership name which consists of the true surnames of the partners joined by the word "and" or the symbol thereof is not an assumed or fictitious name or a designation not showing the names of the persons interested as partners; hence, compliance with the statute is unnecessary.²⁵ The rule apparently is less stringent in the case of an individual proprietor. Thus, where a sole proprietor's surname appears in the designation of the business name, a "fictitious" name is not involved and compliance with the statute is unnecessary. For example, "Vagin Packing Company,"²⁶ "W.S. Wetenhall Company,"²⁷ and "Kohler Steam Laundry"²⁸ are not fictitious names within the terms of the statute requiring the sole proprietor to comply with its terms. Apparently, the theory of these decisions is that, since the object of the fictitious name legislation is to prevent fraudulent trading,²⁹ the sole proprietor who in fact employs his personal name in the business designation cannot be said to be withholding information from customers regarding the person with whom they are dealing. Moreover, an individual proprietor who uses an anonymous business designation not containing his surname is not within the scope of the fictitious name legislation where in fact he either conducts all his business under his true name instead of the anonymous business name³⁰ or the particular transaction involved is conducted under his true name.³¹

It has been judicially suggested that partnerships and individuals were not permitted at common law to do business under fictitious names, that the right to do so is a creature of statute, and, hence, that the Legislature has the right to prescribe certain conditions to be met before suit may be maintained on contracts and other transactions conducted under a fictitious name.³² The historical accuracy of this suggestion may be questioned in light of similar judicial pronouncements to the effect that "a person may adopt any name, style, or signature wholly different from his own name by which he may transact business, execute contracts, issue negotiable paper, and sue and be sued."³³ Perhaps this apparent inconsistency can be explained on the basis that the former suggestion was made in connection with a case involving a partnership whereas the latter was made in connection with a case involving only a single individual. This distinction would serve as well to explain, at least partially, the differences in result that obtain with respect to partnerships and sole proprietors who append business type designations to their true surnames.

A corporation is treated as a person for the purposes of the fictitious name statutes.³⁴ However, its corporate name is not a fictitious name; it is the real name of this "person." The corporation must file a fictitious name certificate only when it is doing business under a name other than its corporate name. For example, if California Mill Supply Corporation is the corporate name and the business is transacted in this name, there is no need to file a certificate. However, if the same corporation transacts its business as Berg Metals Company, it is transacting business in a fictitious name and must file a certificate.³⁵ Filing and amending the certificate is not particularly burdensome on the corporation since apparently the requirements of Section 2466 are satisfied if the certificate lists the name of the person doing business, e.g., California Mill Supply Corporation.³⁶ In the case which suggested this conclusion, the names and addresses of two of the corporation's officers were included in the certificate. This seems to have influenced the court somewhat, but it is unclear whether the court would read this requirement into the statute even though the wording does not require it. 37

Related Provisions--Partnerships

In addition to the fictitious name statute, there are several code provisions which make some provision for filing and publishing information relating to various types of organizations or which regulate the use of fictitious names.

Sections 2466-2471 were enacted as a part of the original Civil Code of 1872. In 1929, both the Uniform Partnership Act and the Uniform Limited Partnership Act were enacted in this state and are now codified in the Corporations Code. Both of these acts contain some provisions for filing and publishing information relating to partnerships. 38

The pertinent provisions of the Uniform Partnership Act are Corporations Code Sections 15010.5 and 15035.5. Section 15010.5 provides that an acknowledged and verified statement of partnership may be filed in the partnership's name or in the names of two or more of the partners in the office of the county recorder in as many counties as the partnership desires. The statement shall set forth the name of the partnership and the names of each of the partners and shall state that the partners named are all of the partners. The certificate may also state the name and date of death of any deceased partner and that such death did not dissolve the partnership because of an agreement pursuant to subdivision (4) of Corporation Code Section 15031. The truth of the matters stated in the certificate is conclusively presumed in favor of a bona fide purchaser for value of partnership real 39 estate in any county where the certificate or a certified copy thereof has been filed. The purpose of the section is to protect bona fide purchasers of partnership real property which is conveyed subject to Section 15010. The fictitious name statutes are intended to provide a source for discovering the identity of the persons who are behind a fictitious name; Section 15010.5, in a limited number of instances, provides another source for obtaining this information.

Section 15035.5 requires the publication of a notice of dissolution at least once in a newspaper in each place in which the partnership business was regularly carried on; it also requires that an affidavit of such publication be filed with the county clerk within 30 days after the publication. Thus, although the filing of the certificate of abandonment is permissive under Civil Code Section 2469.1, the Corporations Code in effect makes the filing of such a certificate mandatory in the case of a general partnership.

42

Corporations Code Section 15502 requires persons desiring to form a limited partnership to sign and acknowledge a certificate setting forth the names and residences of the members of the firm and a good deal of other information and requires that the certificate be filed in the county clerk's office and the county recorder's office in the county in which the limited partnership has its principal place of business, as well as in the recorder's office in each other county where it has a place of business or holds title to real property. This provides the public with another source for obtaining the names of the persons interested in a business if it is a limited partnership.

Corporations Code Section 15505 provides that the surname of a limited partner cannot appear in the firm's name unless it is also the surname of a general partner or unless, prior to the time that the limited partner became such, the business was carried on in a name including the surname of the limited partner. This provision would seem to bring every limited partnership within the scope of Section 2466 under its prohibition against transacting business under "a designation not showing the names of the persons interested as partners in such business." Corporations Code Sections 1552⁴⁴ and 15525 set forth the procedure for amending or canceling the certificate and prescribe when such an amendment or cancellation must be made.⁴⁵ In addition to requiring amendment at other times, these sections require the certificates to be amended whenever there is a change in the membership of the limited partnership. This provision corresponds to the amendment provisions of the fictitious name statutes.⁴⁶

Related Provisions--Certain Licenses Under Business and Professions Code and Financial Code

Business and Professions Code Section 10159.5⁴⁷ requires that any applicant for a real estate broker's or salesman's license to be issued in a fictitious name must file with his application certified copies of the entry of the county clerk and the affidavit of publication made pursuant to the fictitious name statute.

Business and Professions Code Section 8936.1⁴⁸ forbids any yacht or ship broker to conduct business under a fictitious name unless his license is issued in such name. Financial Code Section 12300.2⁴⁹ provides that a check seller or cashier must conduct his business under his true name unless he has complied with the requirements of the fictitious name statutes. These provisions help enforce compliance with the fictitious name statutes.

The Law in Other Jurisdictions

A number of states have enacted legislation that is not dissimilar to the California fictitious name legislation.⁵⁰ However, little assistance can be gained from other states in determining whether the California statute should be revised since the interpretation given the California statute is representative of the law generally in those states having similar legislation.⁵¹

REVISION OF THE CALIFORNIA LAW

Introduction

The foregoing discussion has been concerned with the present law in California and other jurisdictions. The remainder of this study is concerned with the problems that exist in the present law and the suggested solutions to those problems.

As the following discussion indicates, the basic policy question to be resolved is whether the fictitious name statute should be revised, repealed, or retained. If the statute is not to be repealed, clarifying and substantive changes in the statute should be considered and will be discussed.

Should the Fictitious Name Statute (Civil Code Sections 2466-2471)

Be Retained?

The purpose of the fictitious name statute is to prevent fraudulent trading by enabling the members of the public to know with whom they are dealing when they enter into transactions with persons using fictitious names.¹ It is doubtful that the present statute is accomplishing its purpose. This raises a question concerning the necessity and desirability of retaining the fictitious name statute. There are three alternatives to be considered. First, the statute could be repealed. Second, the statute could be amended to make it effective. Third, the statute could be retained substantially as is and could be amended to make its operation less onerous.

Repeal of the Fictitious Name Statute

The present fictitious name statute apparently is not accomplishing its purpose. It is difficult to estimate the degree of compliance with the statute. However, it seems probable that many persons doing business in fictitious names either through choice or inadvertence do not file the required certificate. Even if all the persons who are required to register did so, experience suggests that most members of the public would not consult the records before entering into a business transaction with persons using a fictitious name. In addition, it is probable that few people read the fictitious name certificates that are published in their local newspaper, to say nothing of those which are published in legal newspapers. Even if a person did read such a certificate, it is unlikely that it would be particularly meaningful or would make any lasting impression on him unless he had already had some dealings with the individuals named in the certificate; the reader would have insufficient knowledge concerning the reliability of the persons named to be aided in protecting himself against fraudulent trading.

In addition to failing to give meaningful advance notice, the statute does not contain an effective sanction to enforce compliance. The only penalty for failure to comply with the fictitious name statute is that a party cannot maintain any action upon or on account of any contracts made or transactions had under the fictitious name. Torts arising out of transactions had in the fictitious name are not within this prohibition. Since compliance may be had at any time before the trial of the case and since the defense is waived by failing to object to noncompliance in a timely manner, very few causes of action are lost by failure to comply with the fictitious name statute. In fact, a dismissal of the cause of action for failure to properly file and publish the fictitious name certificate is not considered to be a decision on the merits and, if the statute of limitations has not run, a second suit may be filed on the identical cause of action after the plaintiff has complied with the requirements of the section.⁴ It is probable that this interpretation of the legislation is a judicial attempt to avoid the defeat of legitimate causes of action through the use of noncompliance as a technical defense, similar in nature to the Statute of Frauds. The result is that many persons will not comply with the fictitious name statute since there is no compelling reason to do so.

Another potential defect in the statute is that the penalty prescribed in Section 2468 may not apply to a failure to amend the fictitious name certificate as prescribed in Section 2469. Section 2468 prohibits maintaining an action in any state court "until the certificate has been filed and the publication has been made as herein required." Since Section 2469 requires a new certificate to be filed and published whenever there is a change in the organization's membership, the penalty could be applied to Section 2469 by interpreting the words "as herein required" in Section 2468 as referring to all the sections dealing with fictitious names. No cases were found deciding this question but, if the statute is to be at all effective, the penalty definitely should apply to failure to comply with Section 2469.

The California fictitious name legislation imposes requirements that are burdensome and costly in their application to large partnerships and unincorporated associations. This is primarily true because of the requirement of Section 2469 that a new certificate be filed and published whenever there is a change in the organization's members. The fee for filing and publishing the certificate is only two dollars ⁵ but, if there are frequent changes in the membership, the procedure can become expensive. Considerably less hardship is imposed by the fictitious name legislation in its application to sole proprietors or small partnerships since the initial costs are reasonable and there is less likelihood of frequent change in the membership.

Except in the cases involving a corporation or sole proprietor, Sections 2466-2471 have been applied to unincorporated association only in cases where the substantive liability of the members of the organizations involved was to be determined by applying partnership law. ⁶ Since this result appears to be compelled by the language of Section 2466 which refers only to "every person" and "every partnership," the statute does not restrict the use of fictitious names by organizations whose liability is determined on agency principles. This leaves a serious gap in the coverage of the sections. It also may cause uncertainty as to the necessity of filing a fictitious name certificate since it is not always clear in advance what substantive rules will be applied to determine an organization's liability.

In a limited number of instances, certain filing requirements applicable to general and limited partnerships or corporations produce an overlap in coverage with the fictitious name statute. ⁷ However, the overlap is insignificant and the other sections do not provide the same degree of protection as the fictitious name statute.

On the other hand, the information provided in the fictitious name certificates can serve as an aid to discovery. A plaintiff can learn which individuals comprise a particular firm and he will be able to serve these persons with process more easily. Of course, there is always the possibility that there will be no certificate on record or that, if there is a certificate, it may not be up to date. Section 2466 is a particularly useful aid to the defendant's discovery. If the plaintiff has not filed a certificate, the defendant's objection thereto will force the plaintiff to file an up-to-date certificate in order to continue his action. However, the same information could be obtained through the use of written interrogatories with only a slight increase in cost.

The fact that the public is not always apprised of whom it is doing business with, is caused as much by the public's apathy as it is by the defects in the statute. Public diligence cannot be legislated. However, if it can be done without imposing too great a burden on the registrants, it is desirable to provide protection against fraudulent trading for those who are sufficiently diligent to avail themselves of it. The particular features of the fictitious name legislation which now impose significant burdens on registrants can be amended to alleviate these burdens. Some degree of protection, even though an imperfect one, may be better than no protection at all.

Finally, the fictitious name statute is incorporated into the operation of Sections 8936.1 and 10159.5 of the Business and Professions Code and Section 12300.2 of the Financial Code. In respect to the occupations mentioned in these sections, the licensing requirements work as a second sanction for failing to comply with the fictitious name statute. If the fictitious name statute is repealed, it might be considered to be necessary to amend each of these other sections to provide some new sanction to protect against the use of fictitious names in the occupations regulated therein.

Making the Fictitious Name Statute Effective

Since the purpose of the fictitious name statute is to permit the public to know the persons with whom they are dealing, the key to making the statute effective is to have as many types of business organizations as possible within the ambit of the sections and to provide a sanction that will insure that these organizations will register as required.

At the present time, the biggest deficiency in the coverage of the statute is that the language used has been interpreted not to extend the coverage of the sections to unincorporated associations whose liability is determined by agency law. The courts have also defined "fictitious name" in such a manner that sole proprietors doing business under names, such as Kohler Steam Laundry, and partnerships doing business under common names which include the names of all the interested partners are not within the ambit of the sections. ⁸ Of course, these latter gaps in coverage are not serious since the names of all the interested parties appear in the firm names and one is only dealing with a few individuals. However, if the statute is to give meaningful protection, it should be amended to cover other unincorporated associations whose liability is determined by agency law. Of course, it is in its application to large associations that the fictitious name statute is the most costly and burdensome.

If the penalty for noncompliance with Sections 2466-2471 were made more stringent, it is likely that a high degree of registration would be achieved.

The only sanction directly provided for in the case of noncompliance with the sections is that no action may be maintained to enforce a contract made or transaction had in a fictitious name. This, of course, has reference to suing by joining all the interested parties as individual plaintiffs and has no relation to the common name statute. However, if Section 388 is amended to permit suit to be brought in common name, this sanction, or whatever sanction is adopted, should apply to an action brought in common name under Section 388. In addition, as previously mentioned, an indirect sanction exists where it is necessary to show compliance with the fictitious name statute before certain licenses will be issued in a fictitious name.

One alternative to stiffening the sanction would be to make void any contract or transaction entered into in a fictitious name prior to complying with the sections. If the public generally became aware of the filing requirement and the penalty provided for disregarding it, there would be an extremely high level of compliance. However, many legitimate claims would be defeated in those cases where, either through inadvertence or ignorance of the law, persons failed to register. The small businessman operating without benefit of legal advice would be the person most seriously hurt even though he really is not the person causing the problem that the statute is designed to meet. This amendment would tend to create problems similar to those created by the Statute of Frauds and its numerous exceptions. The courts' interpretation of the penalty now provided by Section 2468 as only providing a matter to be pleaded in abatement is an attempt to avoid just such a result on a smaller scale. This price is too high to pay for increased effectiveness of the fictitious name statute.

Another approach would be to make a contract or transaction unenforceable instead of void if entered into in a fictitious name prior to filing the required certificate. Although this penalty is less harsh, the dangers of defeating legitimate claims and creating a technical defense are still prevalent; such a proposal should not be adopted.

A less extreme amendment would be to provide that no action may be brought on a contract or transaction in a fictitious name until the plaintiff has filed a fictitious name certificate. Then, instead of treating the plaintiff's failure to file the certificate as a matter to be pleaded in abatement, defendant's timely objection to failure to file could be made a ground for dismissing the action. The defendant still could be required to raise the objection by answer or demurrer, or he could be permitted to raise the objection at any time up to some point in the litigation, for example until commencement of the trial or until the plaintiff completes the presentation of his case. Such a provision would create much less of a trap than would be created by making the contract or transaction void or unenforceable. Of course, a plaintiff still would be deprived of his cause of action if the action were dismissed after the statute of limitations had run. The longer the defendant is permitted to wait before he is required to raise his objection, the greater the danger is that the plaintiff may be trapped. Since it is doubtful that this type of amendment would sufficiently encourage compliance, its adoption is not recommended.

Another method of strengthening the statutory sanction would be to apply it to tort actions arising out of the transaction of business in a fictitious name. Of course, this prohibition would apply only to torts committed against the entity and not to torts committed against an individual while he is working for the entity. If Section 388 were amended to permit suit to be brought in common name, this provision would be particularly applicable to tort actions brought in common name. However, if this proposal were adopted, it would seem to extend greater protection to the public than was originally intended. The public is to be protected from fraudulent trading in its legitimate and innocent transactions with firms using fictitious names, but the public cannot claim the right to use this protection as a technical defense to protect itself from its own tortious acts. To so extend the sections would be unwise.

In determining whether or not to adopt any of these amendments to make the fictitious name statute more effective, it should be remembered that the decision depends on whether the increased effectiveness to be gained is considered to be sufficiently important to offset the danger of defeating legitimate claims by creating a technical defense.

Retaining the Fictitious Name Statute Substantially As Is

The remaining alternative is to retain the statute in substantially its present form.

Although the fictitious name statute generally is not effective, it has been made effective in certain areas by making compliance with the statute a prerequisite to obtaining a license or carrying on a particular business.⁹ In these areas, the statute operates effectively and serves a worthwhile purpose. Therefore, it may be undesirable to repeal the fictitious name statute. If it is repealed, it might be necessary to amend the other code sections which now incorporate the fictitious name statute to provide some new sanction.

In other areas, retaining the statute in substantially its same form would provide at least a modicum of protection against fraudulent trading. Some assistance also might be provided in the area of discovery. Finally, the procedural problems which are responsible for most of the burdens presently imposed by the statute can be largely solved by amendment.

Conclusion and Recommendation

The fictitious name statute either should be repealed or, if its substance is to be retained, some procedural amendments should be made to reduce the burden of compliance. The price to be paid in the defeat of legitimate claims is too high to justify adopting the severe sanctions needed to make the statute more effective. The trap that would be created outweighs the necessity of protecting the public.

An acceptable result would be to retain the statute substantially as is. Retaining the statute would result in continued protection in those areas where licensing and regulatory provisions in the Financial and Business and Professions Codes have made the fictitious name statute effective. It also might provide a modicum of protection in other areas and might provide some assistance in discovery. If the statute is retained, it should be revised to clarify some matters and to reduce the burden of compliance. The revisions that would be needed if the statute is retained are discussed below.

The best result would seem to be to repeal the sections. There are gaps in the statute's coverage; there is no effective penalty to force compliance; filing and particularly amending the certificate is burdensome and expensive; and there is no way of legislating diligence into the general public. The most significant obstacle to repealing the sections is that amendments probably would have to be made in several other statutes which are the only areas where the fictitious name statute is accomplishing its objective. However, since the statute is not accomplishing its objective generally and since changing it to enforce general compliance would create an even worse situation, the statute should be repealed.

Needed Modifications if the Fictitious Name Statute is to

Be Retained

Expanding the Scope of Coverage

A serious gap in the protection which the fictitious name statute is intended to provide is caused by the fact that unincorporated associations whose liability is determined by agency principles are not within the ambit of the statute. If protection is to be provided against fraudulent trading, it is desirable to have available a record of the members of all types of business organizations, regardless of the method used to determine their liability. Therefore, if the fictitious name statute is to be retained, it may be desirable to include these additional organizations within its scope.

Although such an amendment theoretically would provide additional protection against fraudulent trading, it should be noted that as a practical matter there is no assurance that this would be the result since there is no effective sanction to assure compliance with the requirement. In addition, the burdens imposed by the fictitious name statute are greatest when the statute is applied to large organizations, many of which are not presently covered by the statute but would be covered if this particular amendment were adopted. Consequently, since there is no assurance that the newly covered groups will comply with the filing requirement, it probably is not desirable to subject them to the potential costs and burden involved.

Publication

Section 2466 requires that the fictitious name certificate be published in a newspaper once a week for four weeks and that an affidavit of such publication be filed with the county clerk within 30 days after completion of the publication. Such publication also is required whenever a change is made in the membership of the filing organization. This latter provision is extremely burdensome on large associations with fluctuating memberships. At the very least, this provision should be amended to permit the publication of an up-to-date certificate on an annual or semiannual basis. In fact, publication should be dispensed with entirely; it serves no useful purpose as a practical matter since a public record can be maintained as effectively upon the basis of the original affidavits without the additional time and expense caused by publication.

Where Should the Fictitious Name Certificate Be Filed?

Section 2470 requires every county clerk to keep a register of the certificates filed with him and a certified copy thereof is presumptive evidence of the facts stated therein. The person or organization filing the certificate need do so only in the county of its principal place of business. Filing only in the county of the principal place of business does not afford adequate protection to those who deal with the person or organization elsewhere in the state.

One solution might be to require the maintenance of a duplicate record in a state office such as the office of the Secretary of State. This provision could apply to all businesses covered by Section 2466 or only to those businesses doing business in more than one county. It would seem to be better to limit the application of this provision to this latter group since it would minimize the additional burden. The main objection to this approach is that it would be costly and, even if it were adopted, it is unlikely that a high degree of compliance would be realized.

Another approach that would provide more protection for the public would be to require the filing of a fictitious name certificate with the county clerk in each county where the firm transacts business in a fictitious name. However, this system would substantially increase the cost, the inconvenience to the registrant, and the possibility of noncompliance.

In view of the lack of any effective sanction to insure compliance with the registration requirement, it would not appear to be desirable to make that requirement more onerous than it now is.

Updating the Fictitious Name Certificate

Section 2469 requires a new publication and filing upon each change of membership in a business organization subject to the fictitious name legislation. The requirement no doubt is intended merely as a means of keeping the original certificate up-to-date. However, it is an imposing burden in cases of large groups where membership frequently changes. The burden imposed is less significant when the group involved is smaller and more stable. However, if the fictitious name statutes are to protect the public against fraudulent trading and are to informally aid discovery, they must be kept reasonably current. The problem is to achieve this result and, at the same time, to minimize the burden imposed. There does not seem to be a solution that will fully solve both problems at the same time so that it must be attempted to achieve as rational a balance as possible.

If a new statement is required only at specified intervals, it is desirable that the statement be an up-to-date list of members. This would obviate the necessities of maintaining past rosters and requiring persons using the rosters to update them by going through a number of periodic statements. If the present system of amendment is retained, it might be possible to file only each change in membership as it happens and then to file a new, up-to-date roster annually or semiannually.

The simplest approach would be to permit all organizations to file an up-to-date certificate annually or semiannually. However, this may not keep the certificates sufficiently current to protect the public and to aid in discovery. If the coverage of the fictitious name statute is extended to organizations whose liability is determined by agency law, the procedure that is adopted to update the certificates should not be based on a distinction as to what substantive law is to be applied to a particular organization. Often it is difficult to know in advance whether agency or partnership law will apply. A better approach would be to have several different procedures that would be applied to groups on the basis of their size and the nature of their business relationship.

A corporation should be required to amend its certificate only when it changes its corporate name or when the names and addresses of its officers or directors change if these items have been included in the certificate.

It is recommended that true partnerships still be required to amend their certificate every time there is a change in the members of the partnership. This provision is not particularly burdensome since the nature of the partnership is conducive to stable membership relationship.

If other unincorporated associations are small enough--for example, those with ten or fewer members--it would not be too burdensome to require them to file an amended certificate every time there is a change in the membership. However, a real problem is presented in respect to a large association. The necessity of keeping the membership list current is the most acute when a large association is involved; but this is also the situation where frequent amendment imposes the greatest burden. The only solution balancing these two considerations seems to be one requiring amendment at regular intervals, for example quarterly or semiannually.

Finally, it should be made clear that the penalty provided in Section 2468 applies to failure to properly amend the fictitious name certificates as well as to failure to file and publish the original certificate. If no sanction is provided for failing to amend the certificate, it is unlikely that the certificates will be kept up-to-date and their value will be greatly reduced.

Abandonment of Fictitious Names

Section 2469.1 provides that a person or organization abandoning a fictitious name in which it is doing business may file a certificate of abandonment. However, there is no requirement that such a certificate must be filed.

It is not crucial that filing a certificate of abandonment be made mandatory, but the present rule contributes to the maintenance of stale records. Of course, there is no effective sanction for not filing a certificate even if the filing were to be made mandatory. However, any effective sanction would tend to create another trap for unwary or uninformed businessmen. Consequently, it is probably best to rely on persons to comply voluntarily with this mandatory filing provision.

40. Corporations Code Section 15010.5 provides:

15010.5. (1) A statement of partnership, in the name of the partnership, signed, acknowledged and verified by two or more of the partners, or such a statement signed by two or more of the partners as individuals, acknowledged and verified by each signing partner, may be recorded in the office of the county recorder of any county. Such recorded statement, or a copy thereof certified by any recorder in whose office it or a copy thereof so certified is recorded, may be recorded in any other county or counties. The statement shall set forth the name of the partnership and the name of each of the partners, and shall state that the partners named are all of the partners. If a partnership is not dissolved by the death of a partner by reason of an agreement provided for in subdivision (4) of Section 15031 the statement or amended statement may state the name and date of death of such deceased partner and that the partnership was not dissolved by reason of such death because of the existence of such agreement.

It shall be conclusively presumed, in favor of any bona fide purchaser for value of the partnership real property located in a county in which such statement or such certified copy thereof has been recorded, that the persons named as partners therein are members of the partnership named and that they are all of the members of the partnership, and that any partner stated to be dead is deceased and that the partnership was not dissolved by reason of such death, unless there is recorded by anyone claiming to be a partner a statement of partnership, verified and acknowledged by the person executing it, which shall set forth the name of the partnership, a statement that such person claims to be a member of such partnership or a statement that any of the persons named in a previously recorded statement of partnership are not members of such partnership.

(2) As used in this section and in Section 15010, "conveyance" includes every instrument in writing by which any estate or interest in real estate is created, aliened, mortgaged, or encumbered, or by which the title to any real property may be affected, except wills; "convey" includes the execution of any such instrument; and "purchaser" includes any person acquiring an interest under any such instrument.

See also Corporations Code Section 15010.6 which provides:

15010.6. Where no statement of partnership as provided in Section 15010.5 has been recorded prior to the death of one or more of the partners, such statement may be signed, acknowledged and verified by two or more of the surviving partners, in the form and manner specified in said section; provided that if all of the partners except one are deceased, the statement may be signed, acknowledged and verified by the last survivor of the partners only; and provided further that such statement shall specify the date of creation of the partnership, which of the partners are deceased and the date of death of each deceased partner.

Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect the provisions of Section 15031 of this code.

41. Corporations Code Section 15035.5 provides:

15035.5. Whenever a partnership is dissolved, a notice of the dissolution shall be published at least once in a newspaper of general circulation in the place, or in each place if more than one, at which the partnership business was regularly carried on, and an affidavit showing the publication of such notice shall be filed with the county clerk within thirty days after such publication.
